With shelgun for the pairiot poor, With mask of words for wealth; With sword unsheathed within your hand You drink the nation's leadth. You kindled fires in years agone, That it the south and wast; And, for your fuel, from our homes Called forth our bravest, best.

And now you trample on the learts. That have not ceased to bleed; And try to bide with sophistries. The truths that all should read.

In vain were millions of such wreaths To hide yourrest intent: Write still you march with those who struck Our marryred president.

The Weather in August. The meteorological summary of the weather for the month of August, prepared at the weather bursan of the signal office shows a mean temperature of 75.1% which is 4.5% lower than in 1872, and 3.1% lower than in 1875, the two extremes for the decade. The rainfall during the month was 3.83 inches. In 1871 it was but 1.59 and in 1875, 12.93. The highest temperature was 95° on the 25th, and the lowest, 55° on the 16th. The greatest velocity of the wind was 28 miles per neur.

with quiet carnestness in the affairs of the village, contributing generously to the support of church and school, and orging forward with the energy and enthusiasm of a christian citizen every good work of public improve-ment and benefit. It is a common saying meet and benefit. It is a common saying among us that "no one has done so much for Falis Church as Mr. Forbes," and it may be said with equal truthfulnes that "the loss of no one would be so greatly felt or more generally regretted." But it is not only as a good and useful citizen, successively letrusted with the highest public offices, that his presence will be most greatly missed. He was respected and honored as a citizen, but as a man and in his private life by all who know life he was his private life by all who knew him he was universally and tenderly loved. His manly qualities of honesty and integrity, his constant desire as he often expressed it to do what is right, gained him the confidence and esteem of everyone, while his warm-hearted sympathy for the poor and the unfortunate, and even for the outcast and hardened criminal, which found utterance frequently in the words of his Saviour. "Eather foreign them, for they of his Saviour, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," the tender, loving charity of his daily life won for him that which he estoemed more than anything else in this world, the friendship and affection and devoted love of his fellowmen. His home-life was rendered especially pleasant and beautiful by the exercise of this centle and forgiving spirit, in which he seemed to have before him the example of the Father in Heavon, who pitleth His children, remembering the frailty of their nature. And in our little church, of which he had but recently become a member upon profession of a simple, trustful faith in the Lord Jesus, being bap-tized at the age of sixty-eight and entering the kingdom of Heaven as a little child, the name of Mr. Forbes has become simest synonymous with a sympathetic curistian charity. It may, perhaps, be truthfully said of him that it was the love of humanity which first took possession of his soul and afterward developed and riponed richly in that highest affection which purifies and consecrates every other—an humble, trustful love of the Heavenly Father. His funeral services, which were observed at the church on Sabbath morning, were attended by the largest and most sympathetic congregation that massver assembled there on such an occasion. And as the familiar and precious words were read, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord," and the lessons of his life were presented by the pastor, it was very evident from the hardly suppressed weeping of the audience that one whom the people leved as a good man and a kind neighbor and a warm personal friend had been taken away. Wedonot personal friend had been taken away. We do no presume that the life of our departed friend, al-though very dear to us, is very widely and generally known. But we take this means of extending to those in different parts of the country, and especially in his old home in New Hampshire, who must gfeel this affliction keenly as we do, our sincere sympathy at the loss of an honest, true friend and a chari-table and loving christian brother.

As an indication of the character of Mr. Forbes, whose obituary appears above, we copy the following from the Bristol Weekly Enterprise, published in New Hampshire: WELLS PORBES. Wells Forbes died at Falls Church, Va., Augus

3. This notice brings to our mind many incident the life of one of the bost men that it has been ogood fortune to claim as a friend. Having known in the control of the in the life of one of the best men that it has been our good fortune to claim as a friend. Having known him for thirty years, we are pleased to lay this tribute on the grave of a noble man: "He was a true friend of humanity." Wells Forbes was born and reared in Danbury, a son of the late Dr. S. B. Forbes, and one of the oldest of a large family. At an early age he was thrown on life own resources, but possessed of a constitution not the strongest, it was by the exercise of his strong will power that he successfully conducted a large business. For many years he lived in the town of Hill, and was well known by nearly every inhabitant of the town. Many are the homes his helpidg hand has helped to supply with the necessaries of life, and many are the hearts that have oven made happy by his timostenisticus gifts. He was a friend of the deserving needy. Many a home will miss his coming. At his new home in Falls Church, Va. he identified himself with every good work for the improvement of the place or people. In the little church of which he was a member, his advice, influence and presence will be greatly missed. To his wife and daughters he loss falls hearily. Though a very large number share with them the loss, it is none the less hard for them to bear, after a long life of usefulness, it mas pleased the all whee one to take him from us, and we can say of him what we hope can be said of us, "This world has been made better for his living in it."
